

Matthew Lugg

I have been a teacher at Russell Hall since September 2016 and have previously worked in schools across the Leeds and Bradford area. I am also the subject coordinator for Science and Computing and have worked with staff over recent years to develop a bespoke science curriculum for our school.

I enjoy the variety of working in a primary school and have a passion for teaching maths, history and science. I believe in an ethos of valuing individuality and recognising the personal achievements of all children, regardless of ability or background.

I am currently working towards a National Professional Qualification in Senior Leadership and look forward to the exciting opportunities this has to offer. In my spare time, I enjoy going to the theatre, walking in the Lake District and visiting different countries.
